

Globecomm's TEMPO Media Platform Earns First Place at Georgia LEARNS Technology Awards

Hauppauge, New York - October 27, 2014 – Globecomm's TEMPO media platform has earned another independent distinction. Georgia LEARNS, an economic development platform focused on establishing the State of Georgia (USA) as a global leader in the effective use of technologies in support of learning, announced the results of its annual Learning Technology Awards competition on October 15, and Globecomm won first place in the technology category, swept the Performance Support category, and finished in second place in the overall competition of over one hundred entrants. Globecomm's TEMPO media platform offers learning and corporate communications professionals an easy system for content management and on-demand distribution.

"We are honored that the learning technology industry has identified our solution as the best performer among the many in the marketplace today," said Globecomm CEO Keith Hall. "This validates the innovation that has gone into making our core TEMPO system simple, comprehensive and able to teach, train and provide very powerful analytics to enterprises and non-profits."

Paul Terlemezian, founder of Georgia LEARNS, added, "Fundamental changes in our global economy are accompanied with shifts in the way that we learn, perform and grow. Georgia LEARNS embraces the efforts of leaders across the spectrum of learning - Pre-K, K-12, Higher Education, Workplace and Personal - to accelerate the relevance and success of their projects. Globecomm's ability to distribute live video with interaction and analytics to any device in a secure and integrated manner reflects their understanding of the way the world expects to learn and perform. Evidence of Globecomm's commitment to results, technology and collaboration were the factors that resulted in their TEMPO solution winning these awards."
